

LEADERSHIP REVOLUTION

Kokoda Leadership Challenge

Ronnie carries a second back pack for an injured team member

The Kokoda track was once the scene of fierce fighting between Australian and Japanese soldiers during World War II, in what could only be described as a hopeless situation. Despite fighting against incredible odds, suffering many casualties and great personal hardship - The diggers held out by calling on four key principles:

- √ Mateship
- √ Sacrifice
- √ Courage
- √ Endurance

Kokoda is a uniquely Australian leadership experience and one that any Australian who is serious about developing their leadership capability should seriously consider this a valuable opportunity.

Treading in the diggers footsteps we first led a group challenge on the Kokoda Track in 2004 along what felt like the world's longest 96 kilometers journey. In this steamy, rugged jungle environment we couldn't have found a better playground to create a leadership challenge. The journey alone challenges everyone in its own way. Just trekking the steep razor back ridges knocks the stuffing out of you. Added to that, the careful sequencing of team roles and facilitated leadership challenges and you've got an intense environment to forge fine leaders.
